Assignment 11

1. What is the most effective approach for developing products that meet the needs of specially-abled people?

a. User-centered design
b. Exclusivity in design
c. Profit maximization
d. Reducing production costs

Answer: User-centered design

2. What are the two key aspects to focus on when developing a product using assistive technology?

a. Promoting awareness about digital alternatives
b. Making users independent and fostering social integration
c. Redesigning existing products for the market
d. Creating exclusive and expensive solutions

Answer: Making users independent and fostering social integration

3. What are the critical factors for a product to succeed in the market?

a. Being trendy and common
b. Being relevant and differentiated c. Being cheap and generic
d. Being expensive and complex

Answer: Being relevant and differentiated

4. What should a startup offer to persuade investors or customers to invest in or purchase its product?

a. An unrealistic guaranteed return on investment
b. A unique and differentiated service or product
c. A vague and unclear value proposition
d. A low-cost product with limited functionality

Answer: A unique and differentiated service or product

5. Why is it advisable to avoid using cheap materials when developing a product, especially in a B2C context?

a. Cheap materials reduce production time significantly
b. Using cheap materials increases return and servicing costs
c. Cheap materials ensure better brand reputation
d. Cheap materials improve the product's aesthetic appeal

Answer: Using cheap materials increases return and servicing costs

6. What potential risk factor could affect the viability of a startup's business model?

a. Strong customer loyalty and retention
b. Reliance on a limited number of corporate clients
c. Rapidly decreasing operational costs
d. Established brand recognition

Answer: Reliance on a limited number of corporate clients

7. How does human-to-human interaction benefit product design compare to AI-based solutions?

a. AI processes designs faster and more efficiently
b. Human interaction fosters empathy and understanding of individual needs
c. AI consistently improves through machine learning
d. AI offers a broader range of design capabilities

Answer: Human interaction fosters empathy and understanding of individual needs

8. How can design contribute to the development of cognitive, motor, and analytical skills in children?

a. By creating interactive games that encourage physical movement and coordination
b. By focusing solely on aesthetic appeal and trendy designs
c. By using advanced technology for entertainment purposes
d. By emphasizing cost-effectiveness over engagement

Answer: By creating interactive games that encourage physical movement and coordination

9. What factors should be prioritized when developing a product using evidence-based learning methodologies?

a. Understanding target customers and measuring the impact of the solution
b. Increasing brand recognition and analyzing market competition
c. Allocating advertising budgets and determining technical specifications
d. Designing packaging and setting product pricing

Answer: Understanding target customers and measuring the impact of the solution

10. Why is it essential for a product to align with customer needs and preferences during its design?

a. To reduce the cost of production
b. To ensure long-term customer satisfaction and loyalty
c. To focus on marketing trends exclusively
d. To simplify the manufacturing process

Answer: To ensure long-term customer satisfaction and loyalty